U.S., East Germany Establish Formal Ties After 25 Years

Will Discuss Claims by Americans

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 (NYT).

The United States established formal diplomatic relations with East Germany today, the last major Western country to do so since the Communist country emerged from relative interna-tional isolation three years ago.

Both governments named ambassadors-John Sherman Cooper, the former Republican senator from Kentucky, for the United States, and Rolf Sieber, a 44year-old professor of economics, for East Germany.

Berlin treaty. France and Britain moved with dispatch to open diplomatic re-lations with East Germany at that time, and other Western nations followed. The United States lagged, partly out of deference to its ally, West Germany, and partly as an expression of reserve toward a government that had caused it trouble in Berlin crises

The number of countries recognizing East Germany changed rapidly after East Germany acreded to the four-power pact on Berlin iate in 1971. Before that, the East Germans had ambassadors representing 30 countries. Now it has diplomatic representatives from 104 countries.

Recognition by the United States remained a prestige goal for the East German leadership. This was reflected not only in the terms of agreement, viewed as generous by the United States. but also in the East German appreciation of today's modest rec-(Continued on Page 2, Col. 5)

But it is also clear that accepting a federal solution for Cyprus could pose political problems for any Greek leader. The government also began making lists of university professors accused of collaborating with the ousted military regime. Mrs. Papadopoulos allegedly collected a salary of 9,000 drach-mas ($300) monthly from the Greek intelligence service without offering any services.

The press, freed of direct consorable by President Anwar Sadat earlier this year, has been criticizing the shortages and accusing Pirst Deputy Premier Abdel Aziz Hegazy of procrastination in his economic policies. Moussa Sabry, an influential columnist close to the President, proposed that the government give up distributing consumer goods.

Basic foods and other essentials are sold for low prices in government stores. But the quantities available at these stores are not sufficient. There are long lines of waiting customers, and many of the goods bought in this way find their way into private shops where they are then sold at much higher prices.

The criticism by journalists and the members of Parliament has obviously stung the government, But Mr. Sadat declared that neither economic difficulties nor the public debate would make him go back on his basic decision to permit free discussion and to generally liberalize the country'e institutions.

Mr. Sadat has not only con-ceded but emphasized Egypt's nomic difficulties.

Ir an attention-catching phrase, he said that before the war with Israel last October, he had reported to his government colleagues that the country's economy was "at point zero," and implied that this bad been an important factor in his decision to go to war.

He added that only after the fighting had started did Egypt obtain $500 million from other Arab countries—a gift, he said, that would not have been available without the war.

The President may well have understated the situation. Some Egyptian experts at the time de-fined the state of the economy not as "zero growth" but said that with obout 800,000 births annually, the economic situation was actually deteriorating.

Department. Herbert Suess, the East German Foreign Ministry official who negotiated the relations, with Arthur Hartman, assistant sec-retary of state for European affairs, was wreathed in smiles at the noontime signing.

Neither Mr. Suess nor Mr. Hart-X an made formal remarks. But a joint communique was issued, outlining the course of relations that is expected to follow in the next

Chief among the communique's points was the agreement to begin negotiations immediately on set-tling claims by U.S. citizens sgainst East Germany, some of which date back to before 1933.

Types of Claims These fall into three major areas: demands for compensation for nationalization of American property; settlement of municipal bonds issued by the Germans prior to 1933 and claims for indemnification of Jews who sutfered losses under the Nazi re-

State Department officials said thet no figures have been estimated for these claims but they are expected to be settled for a nominal amount in the areas concerning municipal bonds and na-tionalisation of property.

The officials said the matter of indemnification for the victims of the Nazis will be dealt with primarily through the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against

This is a private organization that generally negotiates lump sums on behalf of the Jews as group and then distributes the settlement to the survivors and heirs of those who suffered under the Nazis

Position on Claims

A State Department official who briefed reporters but did not want to be named said the East Germans at first declined to agree to negotiate claims arising out of the Nazi experience, claiming that their government was formed separately after the war and had no relationship with the Nazi

However, the East Germans changed their mind after U.S. negotiators stressed that there could be no recognition unles there was agreement to at least discuss such claims, This does not mean, however, that the East Germans' have agreed to pay any indemnifica-tion, only that they will negotiate, the State Department official West Germany, by comparison, igned an agreement in 1952 with the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany that led to an outright grant of $820 million, most of it for Israel, and to the passage of indemnity laws in West Germany that have resulted in the payment of about $15 hillion to individual claimants. The United States and East Germany also agreed to open negotiations within a year on establishing offices other than embassies trade missions, for example. It also is expected that discussions will begin quickly on cultural exchanges and other contacts. Following the signing ceremony, State Department spokesman John King read o statement to newsmen saying that the establishment of diplomatic relations with the East Germans in no way affects the status of Berlin.

He said the city would continue to be administered by the fourpower commission consisting of representatives of the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union.

in the summit conference preliminary sessions for which start with a meeting of economists tomorrow-have been sent a questionnaire asking for their views on 9 or 10 topics.

The economists—who been asked to meet a second time, two weeks hence, to bring in "written views on their best thinking"—will meet in the East Room of the White House, with President Ford presiding.

The White House yesterday re-leased the questionnaire sent to participants at the two presummit sessions for business, and manufacturing groups. It asked for views on government : ex-penditures and receipts, tax levels and incentives, monetary policy. international economic conditions, government regulations, including "wage and price controls,

In addition, participants were asked: "What actions above all would you recommend the Pres-ident and the Congress take at this time-long-term [realistic approaches], short-term [to recognize hardships and mequities]?"
Although it was not included on the questionnaire for the business-manufacturing sessions, Mr. Seidman said that there would also be a discussion of whether there should be an effort to reduce civilian consumption, possibly through higher taxes, in order to diminish inflationary

One potential area of excessive consumption cited by Mr. Seldman is energy resources. where Americans, with 6 per cent of the world's population, use 35 per cent of the available supplies. Farmers Reluctant to Raise It

New Variety of Corn Exceeds Beef, Milk in Usable Protein

By Boyce Rensberger

EL. BATAN. Mexico, Sept. 4 (NYT).—Scientists at the International Corn and Wheat Improvement Center here have developed a new variety of corn that surpasses beef in protein quality and that, pound for pound, contains twice as much protein as milk.

Despite the advantages, however, farmers are not growing it. In many cases ignorant of the principles of nutrition, the farmers are unable to perceive any advantage in the new corn over traditional varieties.

In experiments in Colombia. where large numbers of poor persons depend on corn as their chief food source as do millions throughout Letin America and Africa, diets featuring the new variety have dramatically revers-ed cases of near-fatal protein

The subjects in the experiments were children who were dying because of too great a reliance on ordinary corn, which lacks two essential amino acids without which the human body cannot utilize much of the protein in

The researchers who developed the new corn are now faced with the difficulty of persuading farmers to raise it. Because its yield in weight is slightly less than ordinary corn, there is no marketing advantage because farmers are paid for the quan-tity and not the quality of what

Mr. Achard, whose real name was Marcel Auguste Ferreol, was a farmer's son whose two greatest successes were "Voulez-Vous Jouer Avec Moa" in 1929 and "Patate"

The playwright, who were outsized horn-rimmed glasses, was a well known Paris cafe society figure. His plays, at their best, blended a subtle cynicism and bitterness with their humor.

Mr. Achard spoke excellent English and was at home in both the United States and Britain But his higgest flop, by his own admission, came on Broadway, where his play "Domino" lasted only four performances. In Paris, "Patate" had more than 2,000. Mr. Achard also wrote films, including the movie version of his play, "Jean de la Lune," "The Merry Widow" and "Hurricane." He directed "Jean de la Lune" and "The Waltz of Paris," He was president of the Cannes Film Festival in 1958 and 1959 and the Venice Festival in 1960. Elected to the staid French Acedemy in 1959, Mr. Achard once said: "There is no finer job than to make people laugh. In my own little sphere, I consider my-self a benefactor of mankind."

Gen. Abrams, U.S. Army Chief, Dies at 59

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 (WP). -Army Chief of Staff Creighton W. Abrams died early this morning, 11 days short of his 60th birthday, of complications that interrupted his convalences from the removal of a cancerous lung three months ago; the Army said.

Gen. Abrams, who will be buried at Arlington National Cometery, commanded all U.S. troops in Vietnam from 1968 to Creighton Williams Abrams jr., an officer through three wars, rose from fame as a bloodand-thunder tank commander in the Bastogne breakthrough of World War II to the thinking man's general who shaped the futures of Vietnam and the peacetime U.S. Army.

"Abe" Abrams was far deeper then the popular caricature of him as a gruff, wrinkled-pants

"People are not in the Army," he kept telling officers trying to resuscitate their service from the suffocating Vistnam exper-ience that brought dissension, drugs and fraggings. They are the Army." And the people that are the Army will respond if led properly, he stressed.

His personal leadership ability got its first test of fire in July, 1944, wher he went to Europe as the lieutenant-colonel in command of the 37th Tank Battalion, which fought the Nazis from Normandy into Germany.

The late Gen. George Patton said of him: "I'm supposed to be the best tank commander in the Army. But I have one peer-Abe Abrams. He's the world champion."

Gen. Creighton W. Abrams

Maj. Gen. Dewitt Smith fr., who in July of this year was named commandant of the Army's War College, was in 1944 a second lieutenant fighting in Surope under the command of Col. Abrams, whom he called the bravest, the soundest, the most inspirational combat leader I've ever seen."

In the Korean war this tankcombat veteran got his first major assignment to what is often the bane of the battlefield hero-staff duty—becoming a corps chief of staff in 1953.

Shortly after peacetime promotion to brigadier general, he was admitted to the inner circle of the Army establishment when in 1956, he was assigned to its general staff

HURON, S.D., Sept. 4 (WP) .-If the attendance figures were correct, nearly half of South Dakota's population of 660,000 came here last week for the annual state fair. The politicians came too, because it is where the fall campaigns always begin in South Dakota-no speeches, just shaking hands and meeting the folks.

Sen. George McGovern, the badly beaten Democratic candidate for president in 1972, who is running for re-election to the Senate, sat at a picnic table eating barbecued beef while a steady stream of constituents came up to chat.

"Some of my best friends are Indians," said Ed Scheam, a tall rancher, "but I think we've been giving away too much and giving it too long."

Sen. McGovern listened to his complaint, a complicated issue of who has police jurisdiction over whites and Indians on the state's eight Indian reservations.

Well, we're working on it," Sen. McGovern said. In the evening, Ben, McGovern and his wife, Fleanor, sat stoically through qualifying laps of stockcar races. Mrs. McGovern's new book, "Up Hill," was selling briskly at the Democratic booth, At the Republican party booth. Leo Thorsness, 42, a former pilot who spent six years as a prisoner of war in Hanol, and who is the Republican candidate opposing Sen, McGovern, was focusing on the same sort of questions, trying to make up for political mexperience with charm. This close campaigning is possible, and even necessary, in a state so sparsely populated that a hard-working candidate can shake hands with nearly all of the 393,000 registered voters. And the best issues are the ones closest to home.

War Is Over

Now the senator says: The last thing people in South Dakota want is to get back into that

Mr. Thorsness, who was a colo-nel, agrees. "That war is behind us," he said.

But while the war is called a dead issue, the Thorsness litera-ture tries to remind voters where he was during it. A handbill of questions put to the Republican candidate starts off with these inquirles:

"How much suffering did you go through as a prisoner of war? What was the toughest punishment you had?"

Meanwhile, McGovern partisans joke about the former colonel's cane. Some days he uses it, some days he does not.

Mr. Thorsness has learned that the opposition plays rough. even with a war hero. After the June primary, in which Mr. Thorsness beat two opponents for the Republican nomination. he was widely regarded as a strong possibility to end Sen. Mc-Govern's two-term career in the Senate. Now his prospects appear diminished.

The McGovern campaign staff managed to create issues which knocked the newcomer off bal-

Sen. McGovern attacked his opponent for bringing in Lynn Nofziger, a former aide to California Gov. Ronald Reagan, as his political consultant. "A key ber of the old Nixon 'dirty tricks' game," the senator charged. Syndicated commnist Jack Anderson wrote three columns, which ran in South Dakota newspapers, recounting Mr. Nofziger's political exploits. Mr: Thorsness retreated on every issue. He agreed to debate. Mr. Nofziger was dismissed. The candidate disclosed his percouraging voters to take the former POW's campaign lightly.

Farmers are saying Leo thinks parity is miles north of Pierre. You them chuckling about him and it's devastating in a state like this."

Depth Is Lacking

Mr. Thorsness concedes that his statements on the issues have not had depth and said he is trying to overcome the problem. "I said in the prima-ry, 'Let's get the government off the farm,' and I think I said it poorly," he said. "I meant acreage controls and things like that. Ethiopia to Send Angry Students To Rural Areas

ADDIS ABABA, Sept. 4 (WP). The military announced plans yesterday for a revolutionary program of education under which students will be sent to the countryside "to teach the people and to learn from the people."

In a communiqué issued a day after a demonstration of students and street boys calling for the hanging of Emperor Haile Selassle, the military said that all secondary-school and university students will participate in a nationwide campaign to eradicate illiteracy and to provide health and other services to the impoverished peasantry.

It appears that one of the main intentions of the military is to disperse the 6,000 university students from the capital to avoid demonstrations and possible clashes with the armed forces. The university is scheduled to open Sept. 16 and students are already laying plans for a dem-onstration timed for the opening.

It was not immediately clear whether the military was planning to close down secondary schools and the university to free all students for the campaign.

The University was closed in March because of political turmutilated bodies in Cyprus may not be the last. Such were the passions that vented on the crossed Mediterranean island that terror was practiced upon Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots alike. In the newest instance of Maratha, Turkey claims the victims were Turkish Cypriots. The government of Cyprus a government of Greek Cypriots whose writ runs only into areas not under Turkish military occupation-replies that "hundreds of Greek Cypriots are missing, especially from this same area of Maratha which has been under Turkish occupation since Aug. 11. There is, at present. suspicion that many of the bodies found at the site were Greek."

The government of Cyprus says all reported atrocities should be investigated independently. That would be the correct course if the common objective were to establish a true public record. But that is not the common objective, as Nicosia understands perfectly well. Moreover, it is doubtful whether such diplomatic effort as each Cypriot community can currently manage should be diverted into an inquiry whose process and result cannot fail to further poison relations between them. It will fall, as it probably should, to the historians and folklorists of the two communities to tell the tale-or the two tales-of their dark summer.

The immediate need on Cyprus is for the two communities to begin the talks arranged for them by the United Nations. These talks, which were to have started. were postponed by the Turkish Cyprict leader, Rauf Denktash, who said that because of the Maratha discovery he was "physically and mentally" unable to meet with Glafkos Clerides, head of the Greek Cypriot community and nominally the President of Cyprus, Mr. Denktash could hardly have been expected to ignore the emotions which the Maratha grave surely caused among his people. One must only hope that he, or the government in mainland Turkey for which he speaks, was not exploiting or inventing a

Whether these wounds can be healed is, to be sure, an aching question. What is beyond doubt, however, is that not even a start can be made while the Turkish military maintains its iron hold-40,000 troops-on the island. Secretary of State Kissinger last month stated the formal American expectation that, in negotiation, the Turks would be prepared to yield some of the territory they seized last month and to reduce their forces. But there is yet no sign of this happening.

Turkey has ignored the plight of the tens of thousands of Greek Cypriot refugees whom its troops uprooted. It is unilaterally imposing an administration which amounts to annexation of the richest portions of Cyprus. It is pushing Athens ever deeper into the corner of national humiliation. It is provoking—and providing international sympathy for-a Greek Cypriot guerrilla movement. Ironically, it seems to be nourishing sentiment among Greek Cypriots for union with Greece

In their desperation, some Greeks and Greek Cypriots are flirting with the Soviet proposal to submit the Cyprus question to the 15 members of the United Nations Security Council. It would make as much sense for the Security Council to take up the question of independence for the Ukraine. The Soviet proposal would hand the Kremlin a formal basis for making trouble in and between Cyprus, Greece and Turkey. Support for the Soviet proposition could grow, however, if no suitable alternative vehicle for diplomacy is advanced. The suitable alternative lies in talks between the two Cypriot communities, followed by a reconvening of the Geneva group including Greece. Turkey and Britain. In our view, that is the objective to which American diplomacy ought to be directed.

Leavening in Chile?

There are indications that Chile's military rulers may be contemplating the release of some of the thousands of persons still held for political reasons a year after the overthrow of President Salvador Allende. Nothing could do more to improve the international standing of Gen. Augusto Pinochet's

Chile is badly in need of the goodwill it could gain abroad by freeing such prominent figures in the Allende government as former Foreign Minister Clodomiro Almeyda and former Ambassador to Washington Orlando Leteller to accept academic appointments awaiting them in this country. No charges were ever filed against either.

Chile's international image remains acutely in need of repair in the face of eleven complaints filed last month by the Human Rights Commission of the Organization of American States. In addition, there is evidence that two backers of Dr. Allende were summarily executed in August. The government is said to be investigating the deaths, reported by Joseph Novitski of the Washington Post-a dispatch that evidently led to a brief house arrest of Mr. Novitski and a threat to expel him from Chile. Authorities in Santisgo, however, have not responded to the OAS call for a halt to torture

President Pinochet has nevertheless made a conciliatory response to an appeal by leaders of Chile's four largest religious denominations-Catholic, Methodist, Lutheran, Jewish-for an end to repressive measures. The fact that the President's response was given front-page play by a government newspaper raises hopes that some prisoners may soon

Franco's Return to Power

Gen. Franco is approaching his 82d birthday. His recent illness was serious. The curious wording of the official medical bulletin on Sunday, that he was now "clinically cured," suggests that he has not really recovered. During his six weeks' absence from office, rapid progress had begun to be made among all factions looking ahead to the future formation of political parties. That activity will no doubt continue. But the drawback about Gen. Franco's return to power, probably in a greatly weakened state. is that the transition crunch when it comes will now be a very sudden one. If he had continued in the background, the political process could have gone on more calmly. People would have become accustomed to the presence of Prince Juan Carlos, who is designated as future king, in his capacity as acting head of state.

Franco has ruled Spain for 35 years. His rule has been a remarkable one by any standards, both for its achievements and its failings. It would be a tragedy for Spain and Europe if it were to end.

Power in Britain

The election is likely to produce an increase in the numbers of Scottish Nationalists and, with Mr. Enoch Powell, an accession of parliamentary effectiveness to the Ulster Unionists. We would welcome Mr. Powell back, while dissenting strongly from the majority of his views; cogency of mind strengthens the process of Parliament. Yet this troop of Ulster and Scottish nationalists is likely to make the next Parliament more ungovernable than the present; the new Parliament will also face a later and more dangerous stage in the economic crisis.

In this situation, with the cup of power very probably a poisoned chalice, and almost any outcome of an autumn election quite conceivable, many electors will remain for the present undecided; indeed many may not make a final decision until the campaign is over and they find themselves in the polling booth. That may well be right. The last chance is not one that should be taken lightly, nor is the decision one that needs to be made until each party has explained exactly how it would overcome this crisis, the worst economic crisis in forty years.

Ford and the Economists—And Slumpflation

By Leonard Silk

NEW YORK-President Ford will sit down at an oval table in the White House today with 21 invited economists for the first of the meetings leading up to the summit conference on what is wrong with the economy and what to do about it.

Since the economists range from a self-styled new Socialist such as John Kenneth Galbraith to Keynasian liberals such as Paul Samuelson, Arthur Okum and Walter Heller to Nixoman conservatives such as Paul Mc-Cracken, Herbert Stein and George Similia, as well as an outstanding Priedmanian such as Milton Friedman, the safest prediction in the history of economic forecasting is that Ford is going to hear lots of conflicting advice.

But the most important and difficult question that the President is going to have to resolve for himself (since the economists cannot resolve it among themselves) has little to do with political ideology. Liberals and conservatives are to be found on both sides of the most crucial issue, which is this: Does the U.S. economy need a protracted period, possibly lasting two years or more, of tight money and re-strictive fiscal policy (whether through shift budget cuts or tax increases) as the basic cure for inflation? Or would a long spell of tight monetary and fiscal policy primarily increase unemployment while having only a slight effect in slowing the rate of

Tight-Money Men

Ford's own economists, led by his newly appointed chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, Alan Greenspan, obviously favor tight - money - tight-budget policy, and Ford himself already seems to have accepted that ad-

He has already said that he intends to force the budget below $300 billion in expendituresthe January, 1974, submission for the current fiscal year put it at $305 billion, and the numbers have been crawling up, partly because of inflation, partly because of congressional actions. In addition, Ford has reaffirmed Nixon's intention of reducing the federal payroll by 40,000 workers, and has deferred a scheduled 5.5 per cent pay increase for civil servants for three months, unless Congress reverses him. Nor is there the slightest evidence that Ford or his advisers have any intention of trying to coar the Federal Reserve Board to adopt a more expansive monetary policy.

But if Ford has already made up his mind on the necessity of subjecting the economy to a protracted period of tight money he might as well not bother to hold his summit, or at least not invite dissenting economists to participate in it.

For another group of economists including not only Keynes-ian liberals who have served in past Democratic administra-tions but even some Republicans about particular sectors of the economy, such as housing or the securities markets—are fearful that a prolonged slege of tight ney is the wrong medicine at the wrong time.

They maintain that, with American industry operating at little more than 80 per cent of ity, and unemployment at 5.3 per cent and almost certainly rising, inflation is not being caused by excess demand but by a complex of factors, including: · Strong upward pressure from wages in excess of productivity · Powerful pressures on food energy and commodity prices. Poor growing weather and stillsoaring world demand is forcing up food prices, for example.

· Many of the forces pushing prices upward are now perceived to be consequences of "microeco-nomic" (market) actions by government itself. These include the long lists of ftems, ranging from Interstate Commerce Commission rate-fixing for the railroads to Agriculture Department bens on marketing small-size vegetables or certain food shipments from one part of the country to another, that both liberal and conservative economists denounce,

There is no sure way of knowing how long the impact of slow monetary growth would take be-fore it brought down the rate of price increase to 3 or 4 per cent per annum. Chappaquiddick

Re: "Chappaquiddick; Still Percolating," by William V. Shannon, (IHT, Ang. 20): ... Not with_ out the prodding of the likes of Mr. Shannon it's not!

As a staunch proponent of free and objective journalism since long before Watergate, Tm moved to question Mr. Shannon's article z-neeming Sen. Kennedy's potential candidacy as troubled by the sorrow of Chappaquiddick's past, vis-a-vis ex-President Nixon's political demise.

Is it really necessary to remind Mr. Shannon that Richard Nixon. was always thus, that his misappropriation of power only became finally intolerable when he abused almost total power flagrantly, with total disregard for principles and the people he supposedly served?

If so, then it must also be necessary to ask Mr. Shannon to compare, if possible, Nixon's wanton abuses with Kennedy's ocent. Where was the outraged public and Congress during Kent State and the case of Lt. Calley, the Christmas bombing of Indochina and the peace with honor? Those tragedies were the results of decisions, not accidents. As I have followed it, Sen. Kennedy's behavior—political and private— since Chappaquiddick have been exemplary. In fact, his restraint during Nixon's slow, overdue decline was a remarkable display of political temperance.

Since the parents of Mary Jo Kopechne are among Sen Kennedy's most fervent supporters, I find it suspicious that Mr. Shannon suggests a public lust to re-open this wound. I hear no outcry from anyone who lives in a glass house, as most of us do—and none at all from handicapped children. the people of Bangladesh, or the elderly and ill... not to mention his colleagues in Congress.

Nixon and Law

William F. Buckley and Nelson Rockefeller have added their names to the list of persons who would rather not see former President Richard Nixon prosecuted. They thus show that they have little understanding of the purpose of law within a society ruled by a constitutional government. The reason given by Mr. Buckley as well as by Mr. Rockefeller, and by many opponents of prosecu-tion, is essentially that "enough tion, is essentially that "enough is enough." Unfortunately such a guidaline is not enforceable, since its meaning varies from indivi-dual to individual, and case to

The same problem arises with the men who exiled themselves, rather than fight a war they considered evil It is to overcome these difficulties that the citizens enter a contract, with the Constitution and the subsequent laws, by which they agree that what is enough is what a jury decides to be. Consequently, to decide what is an appropriate punishment for Mr. Nixon's actions, there is no

Amnesty for Nixon

When the subject of amnesty for former President Nixon is discussed I think there are a few important points to remember.

Nixon's was "the law and order" administration and he was elected after a campaign based strongly on that theme. It was this administration which relied heavily on the widespread use of the conspiracy charge: the Chicago-7 and the Berrigan brothers. And it was Nixon himself who ruled out amnesty for the Americans living abroad for their opposition to the Victorian war. interests of the nation to prosecute the former President, but in no case should such action precede an amnesty for those who violated a law in the patriotic and best interests of their coun-

Under Mr. Rissinger, however, expediency has become the key word of U.S. foreign policy. Old historic and valued bonds are questioned, ignored or even severed if the expediency of the moment so dictates. This shift of policy may have affected such nations as Israel and Taiwan but certainly to the Greek people it has proved a calamity. The ties of friendship between the United States and Greece go back for many years and are based not only on the wars which the two nations have fought as allies, but also on a communion of heritage, ideals and culture. It is no exaggeration to say that the United States was Greece's most cherished friend and ally. Yet Turkey is today considered more valuable mili-tarily to the United States. This to Mr. Klasinger is reason enough to favor and support Turkey and refuse a helping hand to Greece in its hour of need in Cyprus. The fact that Turkey and the United States, unlike Greece the United States, have little in common historically or culturally and have only recently become allies is of little importance when viewed by the secretary of state in the context of the expediency of the moment E.G.E. EMBIRICOS.

Greek Cypriot Woes

Allow me to raise my voice with all the strength of my being against the inhuman fate which is being inflicted on tens of thousands of Greek Cyprus inhabitants who have been chased out of their homes, forced to abandon all their belongings and to flee for their lives, old people and bables, destitute of everything, camping without a roof over their heads without proper food, threatened by epidemics. And this is taking place not in a Nazi country where there would be the cxcuse of lack of accessibility, but on a land serving as a defense base to the Western alliance, guarantors of life, liberty, justice.

How can you, representatives of the free press, who for weeks, months and years on end have published day in and day out, endless columns on Watergateand very judiciously so-now fail so unanimously to cry out your indignation and to demand that all material aid be immediately supplied by the United States in order to relieve the conditions of the destitute by shipment of foodsupplies, medicines, clothing, prefabricated living quarters, for the survival of these people until a political settlement is reached? The fact that we, Americans, are peatly to blame for the diplomatic blunders which have led to this disastrous mess, at least ought to spur us to fast and efficient action in order to avoid a holocaust among the innocent victims of this situation.

By William E. Farrell

CLEVELAND (NYT).—"Let's go, women!" boomed Grace Groom from a stage from which she looked out over a calm sea of hundreds of gray, white and bluerinsed permanents, Spurred by Mrs. Groom's enthusiastic promptings, the reedy voices in the grand ballroom of the Sberaton-Cleveland Hotel grew louder, firmer and more urgent and clayed that way right through the last heartfelt chorus of "Boverage Alcohol Must Go."

Wearing tiny white enamel bows, the WCTU emblem, and ribbons on their chests, the temperance society members listened to the ever spiraling statistics on liquor consumption in America and renewed their vows to duel with John Barleycorn to the bltter end.

The many meetings the women hold are marked by hymn sing-ing, heady ienunciations of alcohol in all its forms, reading from inspirational tracts and hortatory speeches urging the members to fend off despair and to prove that abstinence makes the heart grow fonder.

For those wearied of the workshops and the speeches, tours of downtown Cleveland were arranged.

gan on Friday night with greetings by officials from other temperance groups such as the Rev. Samuel Jeannes of the International Reform Federation, who told the assemblage that without the WCTU "America would be further down the toboggan of moral deterioration."

The highlight of the evening was a speech by Mrs. Fred Tooze, the 71-year-old WCTU president, who is retiring after 15 years

Wearing a long white gown with an orchid pinned to her left shoulder, Mrs. Toose, whose first name is Ruth and who has inured herself to the doggerel her ed the delegates to "the city of our natal days."

Her speech traced the organization's roots to 1873 when women "powered by prayer" formed "praying bands" and "went into the saloons to convert the men who sold liquor and thus save the homes from the curse of drink."

Some Successes

There were some successes in persuading saloonkeepers to enter another line of work, Mrs. Tooss said, but a number of barkeepers merely reopened elsewhere under different names.

"It was soon discovered that more than moral sussion was re-quired," she told her rapt audience, and the WCTU sprang out of the fervor of the crusading women who "went into the grog shops to plead on their knees for their homes and loved ones."

On Nov. 18, 1874, 135 women met in the Second Presbyterian Church in Cleveland to dedicate themselves to extinguishing the liquor traffic and the WCTU was born with the election of Annie Wittenmyer of Philadelphia as its first president.

There have been only nine presidente of the organization over the years, all of whom were honored in a costumed pageant enacted Sunday with various members assuming the roles of past leaders and Mrs. Tooze playing herself.

One of the major WCTU leaders was Frances Willard, who in 1876 assessed the task facing the women in trying to forever thwart "the rum power in Amer-

"The enemy was rich beyond their powers to comprehend," Miss Willard told a temperance convention in Philadelphia, "He had upon his side the majesty of law, the trickery of politics and the league's strength of that almost invincible pair appetite, Three watchwords-organize, educate, legislate"-became the WCTU leitmotifs. The era of Prohibition was a time that still evokes applause and nostalgia whenever some of the estimated 250,000 members across the country gather together.

'One of Finest Eras'

"The 13 years of Prohibition was one of the finest cras in the 200-year history of the United States of America," Mrs. Toose "You can't make people moral by law is an old cliche to which many giva credence. It is true that you can't make people moral or good by law but you can help them to be good hy

In a WCTU history called "Heritage of Dedication: The Story of the Matchless Machine Manned by Christian Women." the section on the Prohibition era does not dwell on the seamier aspects of that time when gangsters flourished, speakeasies thrived, bootleggers were rampant and health was destroyed by bathtub gin and other dubious

Instead, it is depicted as a time when the nation, "freed from the narcotic effect and economic and human loss from drink began its greatest march in history in industrial, commercial, financial and social progress."

That all ended with repeal of the Volstead Act, the history says, which was accomplished by "a politico-vice alliance" intent on wrecking "the performance and spirit of Prohibition that had created a climate in which a new America had been built."

Half a Million Members

Today the organization claims affiliates, numbering perhaps 500,-000 women, in 72 countries, and national organization America is actively engaged in recruiting young members in the largely over-50 organization. Six-to-12-year-olds are urged

Mrs. Tooze was interviewed shortly after her letest recommendations were adopted by the delegates. The recommendations included reactivating sermonwriting contests and beginning a fruit juice-drinking project during the fourth week of April, dubbed Walkiki Week, that is aimed at servicemen who drop into USO centers.

The dues in the organization are $3.65 a year—"a prayer and a penny a day"-although Mrs. Toose urged the members at one point to "let the will of God guide your mind and heart and also your pocketbook in the making of your will."

Asked what project was particular interest to her now that she is retiring, she replied, hour of social freedom to free hostesses from the idea they have to serve alcohollo beverages." To abolish the cocktail or

China to Explore 'Peking Man' Site

CHOUROUTIEN, China. Sept. 4 (Renters) .- Preparations are under way to begin excavating again in this North China village, where the collection of fossilized bones known as the Peking Man was found half a century ago.

Huang Wei-wen, a paleontologist from Chungshan University in Canton, was sent here recently to organize a team and formulate plans for resuming work at the prehistoric site, which has been untouched for nearly eight years. But other excavations have been undertaken since then a few miles away in the hope that they might yield a successor to what is believed to have been the world's first spe-man, whose remains have been lost since 1941. Choukoutien, a bustling village at the foot of a range of hills some 30 miles southwest of Peking, has changed considerably since the first fossilized bones were dug up in the early 1920s. A modern exhibition center near the site contains offices, reception rooms and a permanent display of human and animal fossils. The exhibition was opened

California Asked For Health Rules On Birth Device

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 4 (NYT).-A coalition of women's organizations has announced here that it has filed a petition with the California Department of Health asking for stringent new regulations governing intrauterine contraceptive devices.

Patsy Fulcher, the chairman of the Coalition of Medical Rights for Women, said: "Women are tired of being used as guinea pigs for untested medical devices sold at enormous profit by large drug companies."

The petition requests the adoption of regulations that would require manufacturers to take all steps necessary to inform women of the potential dangers of con-tinued use of intrauterine devices, which came juto wide use in 1970 after U.S. Senate hearings on the dangers of oral contraceptives. At Food and Drug Administration hearings in Washington, 36 deaths were reported to have re-sulted from use of the devices in this country. A survey of physicians by the U.S. Center Disease Control disclosed that the use of the devices led to over 3,500 hospitalizations in the first six months of 1973.

The very name "collard" sttaches this plant to the ancient nonheading cabbage, saide from the more potent fact that it does not, in fact, form a head. "Col-lard" is a corruption of "cole-wort," which denotes specifically the characteristic of not heading in cabbage. A young cabbage can be called, properly, a cole-wort, because it has not yet reached the heading stage; collards or kale are coleworts because they will never reach it.

EVERYBODY WHO WANTS TO STOP THE KILLING IN CYPRUS. her way—by fighting with us in both world wars and Korea, by supporting U.S. policy in every international forum, by loving our country. Any American who's ever been to Greece knows that.

GREEK — AMERICANS, ARMENIAN — AMERICANS,

As you read these words, Greek Cypriot and Armenian Cypriot As you read these words, Greek Cypriot and American Cypriot atthers are being separated from their families and shipped to the Turkish mainland. Women and children are being molested. Shepherds returning to their villages to care for their animals are being killed. Turkish troops break the cease-fire daily, crossing their "Attila line" (the Turkish high command gave it that name), killing anyone they find in Greek villages like Patra.

What is happening now in Cyprus is faithful to Turkish history. In one year, 1915, they slaughtered a million Armenians, an efficiency record never bettered by Hitler. In 1923, hundreds of thousands of Greek civilians in Asia Minor were butchered. We are living today, 1974, and are standing by and watching genocide—with about the same "justification" as Hitler's. It will result in war between Greece and Turkey and God knows Greek Oppression of the Turkish Cypriot minority. Greek Oppression of the Turkish Cypriot minority. The 18 % Turkish Cypriot minority had, under the 1960 constitution which gave independence to Cyprus, 30% of the parliamentary seats; 40% of the police force and armed force; and a virtual veto power on governmental decisions. But in fact the 82% Greek and Armenian part of the population controlled virtually all industry, commerce, and the government hureaucracy. The Turk of Cyprus is a farmer or laborer. He was not pushed by his parents or community to go to the mainland or abroad to study. It was not part of his ethic. This was true for 14 years under an independent Cyprus; true when the Island was a British colony; and true while under Ottoman rule. It was also the situation on the Turkish mainland until the "solution" of extermination cited above. The problem is jealousy. Jealousy maddens. Genocide is being committed again by the Turks against the same people.

But the Greeks started the whole mess.

Yes the Greek mainland dictatorship of Ioannides, like all failures needed a diversionary activity. Cyprus was a good and old cause. But as incompetent as this dictatorship was, its survival was too dependent on America for them not to signal their intentions to the U.S.—somewhere in our governmental apparatus. Some days before the Sampson putsch on Cyprus. didn't our Secretary of State call Monselgneur Makarlos, the Custro of the Mediterranean?

The U.S.A. could have stopped it all.

The U.S.A. could have stopped it all.

President Johnson used his phone in 1964 and 1967 and told the Turks to keep their troops home. They did.

Mr. Kissinger, if not a preoccupied Mr. Nixon. could have called Mr. Ecevit, or whoever in the Turkish military that runs Turkey. Let us assume that Mr. Ecevit is a man of good faith. However, he obviously does not control the military who repeatedly turn his promises into mockery.

The present U.S. Secretary of Defense, James Schlesinger, said all that needed to be said—cut it out Turkey or no more arms. But the next day Henry Kissinger rehuked this position. There is an argument that previous U.S. attitudes stopping Turkish military intervention rankled the Turks: that Ecevit needed to be more militant than his military to survive; that the Turks in the initial intervention phase, acted properly to safeguard their minority and the independence of the island. Doesn't all this Turkish success allow Mr. Ecevit the necessary room to maneuver at home. After nll, for his people, and his military, he has gone further than any recent Turkish leadership. Turkey did intervent.

If he is a democratic statesman who wants to survive democratically, does he not need a strong and democratic neighbor in Greece?

But America is not the World's Policeman.

Nobody is talking of sending American troops anywhere. We are talking of America speaking clearly to two Nato allies. We have a very special interest in doing so—for the first time in many years, Greece and Turkey are simultaneously heading toward democratic government which might offlow some discussion between the two, and thus peace in this area. America has some very special obligations to do so. Both countries are armed to the teeth by us.

The Greek dictatorship continued to exist not only because of police torture, thousands of political prisoners, feer, 200 dead students at the Athens Polytechnique, but mainly because our government OK's it.

government OK's it. The Ambassador to Greece, Tasca, openly supported the dicta-The Amoussador to Greece, Tassa, openly supported the dicta-torship—would not see opposition leaders until he saw the regime beginning to crumble last November. We even sent our illustrious Greek-American VP, Spiro Agnew, to bless the junta. The anti-Americanism in Greece has still to reach the proportions of what it is today in Turkey. Ask any American sallor who's gone into a Turkish port. This anti-Americanism is every American's fault, but particularly we Greek-Americans. We disn't open our mouths. we didn't open our moutos.

America's pro-Turkish position on Cyprus shattered Greece's American dream—the land of the free, the just. America had always been Greece's protector—from Wilson to Roosevelt to Truman to Kennedy to Johnson. And Greece tried to repay in Greece woke up and discovered that in the end she was only Greece woke up and discovered that in the end she was only a pawn. As Henry Brandon of the London Sunday Times whote, "Even the Pentagon, which had a definite preference for Greece because of its bases there, shifted during the crisis to the view that Turkey was militarily more important."

Another war. More probable because the Turkish invasion of Cyprus of July 20/21 failed.

Most of the Turkish paratroopers landed in the bay of Kyrenia; the attempt to take Famagusta by sea failed; the Turkish air force sank its own ships 'Our Nato ally's air force has never been rated at Nato performance standard—

A strife-ridden, pro-Makarios vs pro-Sampson Greek Cypriot force held them off—until the first U.N. cease-fire.

Turkey then proceeded to land 35,000 troops and new equipment—during the cease-fire. Turkey expanded her precarious beachduring the cease-life. Turkey expanded her precarious beach-head, and took Fumagusta—during the cease-fire. They moved whila a new Greek government was taking over from the military. They moved while the only world forum we have, the U.N. Security Council, kept talking. Despite the courage of the British Foreign Secretary, James Callaghan, who unequivocally condemned Turkish gun-on-the-table diplomacy, only one nation spoke clearly—France.

Can our world survive many more Vietnam; or Palestinian injustices? Where is the breaking point?

The Turks continue to push aside U.N. forces who protect Greek villages. They do not allow the 200,000 refugers to live. There are already over 4,000 Greek and 200 Turk civilian casualties. Turkish troops block the repair of the public water works by Greek engineers. They continue to demolish civilian targets—old age homes, mental hospitals the only Armenian high school in the Western world—miles from any military targets. If they continue to loot and desecrate churches and cemeteries, if their ancient hatred is not brought under control—then like the Palestinian or Vietnamese, the Greek and Armenian Cypriot will be driven to maddening acts to defend themselves—which, yes, will also be horrible crimes.

The Turkish army will as promised by its leaders, retaliate with a hrutality never seen in modern times. Then Greece will intervene. Then who else will come in?

Henry Kissinger no longer works for a crippled President. . . Hope.

President Ford may have his hands full with domestic and world-wide economic problems. But by choosing Nelson Rockefeller, one of the most experienced statesmen in foreign affairs—It just might be a powerful signal that President Ford intends to put his mark on American foreign policy. And his mark is straight talk—so is Nelson Rockefeller's.

No man has been a more constant friend of Greece than Rockefeller.

We have someone to talk to. Let's speak out this time. All of us can help our government re-think its world strategy in terms. O. K., of self interest, but that is true to our nation's historical position—the use of our strength to defend the weak and oppressed. What America's enemies fear is that we just might speak clearly again.

The solution will not be the 5th Security Council resolution. It could be America joining France and speaking out. Nobody is asking you for money. Much more. Your concern, your mind, your time, your action. You, yourself, alone. Your individual action is all that is left to prevent genocide and a subsequent war.

Some Action suggestions.

U.S. Auto Output Drops 4 Percent

U.S. anto makers built 450,578 cars in domestic plants in August, down about 4 per cent from the 469,730 produced in the year-ago month and almost 11 per cent lower than the 504,000 units planned for the month. Strikes at key auto suppliers and labor troubles at auto assembly plants cut anticipated production for the month. Only Ford and American Motors posted gains from the August 1973 production levels. CM Says Price Hikes Will Hurt Sales The recent sharp price increases on U.S. sutos are likely to prevent the auto market from recovering as much in the 1975-model year as it might have, General Motors concedes. Other informed oil sources in Beirut said a similar drastio drop in throughput has been registered for Iraqi Kirkuk oil at the Tripoli terminal, formerly owned

Bank Admits Cover-Up In Penn-Central Deals

By Philip Green

NEW YORK, Sept. 4 (WP).— One of Wall Street's best-known investment banking firms has admitted it did not reveal significant information to investors in Penn-Central Corp. in the months before the railroad filed the biggest bankruptey in history.
In court papers filed here,
Gustava Levy, senior partner of
Goldman, Sachs & Co., said he knew the firm was selling commercial paper in Penn-Central while it possessed private infor-mation indicating severe financial problems.

Commercial paper is a form of short-term investment used chiefly by corporations. Goldman, Sachs is Wall Street's largest commercial paper dealer and sold hundreds of millions of dollars worth of Penn-Central paper from 1968 to 1970.

Trial is Set

After Penn-Central went into reorganization on June 21, 1970, a number of suits were filled against Goldman, Sachs charging that the firm did not adhere to federal disclosure rules. Several of the suits have been settled out of court. At the time of its failure. Penn-Central had $82.5 million in commercial paper out-standing, down from a peak of ahout $200 million

The Levy testimony is in a deposition taken in May, 1972, which has come to light now because the first of the remaining suits is scheduled for trial in federal court bere on Sept. 9. The plaintiffs in the suit are Welch Foods Inc., the grape juice manufacturer; Younker Bros. Inc., a department store chain based in Des Moines, Iowa; and C.R. Anthony Co., a variety store chain in Oklahoma. A fourth plaintiff in the suit Federated Investors, settled out of court in

Sociedad Agricola Industrial San

Cristobal, which was founded and

Sachs possessed nonpublic information about Pcnn-Central's financial condition which should have been given to potential investors. The firm has taken the position, according to a Securities and Exchange Commission study of the Penn-Central case, that it was only a dealer in the commercial paper and did not have the obligation to disclose information that normally falls on an underwriter of securities, Throughout the 263-page deposition, Mr. Levy, a former chairman of the New York Stock Exchange who is regarded as one of the most influential people in Wall Street, denied any day-today contact with the sale of Penn-Central commercial paper. However, he said he was the "principal contact" with the company and was partly responsible for hringing the railroad's husiness to Goldman, Sachs.

Goldman, Sachs hegan sciling commercial paper in Penn-Central in 1969, after the Interstate Commerce Commission gave the company permission to issue 3100 mil-lion worth. The limit was later raised to $150 million and then to $200 million,

In his deposition, Mr. Levy discussed the two types of memo-randa that Goldman, Sachs used to report on its commercial paper issuers. One, called "green sheets," was sent periodically to purchasers of the paper. The other, called "blue sheets" although they were actually white, were circulated among Goldman, Sachs personnel and "sometimes" contained nonpublic Information, "Were you aware that Goldman, Sachs & Co. was selling commercial paper of Penn-Central while it possessed nonpublic information on Penn-Central?" Mr. Levy was asked by plaintiff's counsel Daniel Pollack "I was aware that Goldman, yes." Mr. Levy replied, according to the deposition.

In November, 1969, Mr. Levy testified, he hecame aware that Penn-Central would report a $40-million loss for the first nine months of 1969, compared with a $1-million loss in the same period

A "green sheet" issued to cus-tomers on Nov. 13, 1969, did not include that information, but Mr. Levy said. "I have no idea why it) did not." He said he was not aware that, in approving the last increase in the commercial paper limit for Penu-Central, the ICC said it was "concerned" about the use of short-term credit 'o provide loug-term financing, or, according to the deposition, that on Nov. 6, 1969, "the ICC expressed concern about the deliclt working capital situation of the railroad."

Last May, the SEC flied charges against Goldman, Sachs, charg-ing violation of anti-fraud provisions of the Securities Act of 1933. The firm signed a consent agrecment, neither admitting nor denying the charge but agreeing to an injunction against violations and to changes in some of its procedures. Industry Orders Decline Sharply In W. Germany

BONN, Sept. 4 (AP-DJ).—Or-ders to West German industry in July showed a much sharperthat usual decline, the Economics Ministry said today.

July industrial orders dropped 16.5 per cent from June. The ministry noted that the average June-to-July drop in recent years had been only 9 per cent. However, the ministry said that in the two-month June-July period, orders showed a seasonallyadjusted increase of 0.5 per cent over April-May. It said the twomonth reckoning is less subject to accidental influences than onemonth figures and therefore is more significant in assessing the economy. July orders were 13 per cent above the year-earlier-level, the ministry sald. But it added that if the latest order totals are adjusted to exclude the effect of price increases, orders actually fell almost 2 per cent. Industrial production also showed a sharper-than-normal drop in July. Daily production declined 17 per cent from June, against a sessonally normal 11 per cent drop. The ministry said, however, that the June-July decline from April-May was only 4 per cent. against the seasonally normal 6.5 per cent. It said the two-month comparison, more reliable in judging the trend than the July figures alone, showed neither pronounced strength nor weakfirst." said Col. Carlos Max de Andrade, the No. 2 man in the federal sugar agency. "The only way we would possibly cut back on our internal food supplies would be in time of war."

The main reason for the drastic world sugar shortage, experts here say, is that the international sugar industry vastly under-estimated how fast sugar con-sumption would go up in the past few years. Especially in developing countries.

"Sugar is status," Mr. Andrade said. "All over the world, as peo-ple's living standards rise and they get more money to spend, they consume more sugar. They want more bread, more ice cream, more Coca-Cola, more beer-even more lollipops."

Brazil's biggest single customer for sugar is the United States, which for over 25 years has bought this product from a selected group of nations at prearranged prices.

Since the U.S. preferential price usually was higher than the world free-market price, this policy hailed out the many small sugargrowing nations who were political allies of the United States. Now, however, the world free-market price is higher than the special U.S. price, and, in the words of a Brazilian sugar official, "It doesn't make any difference what the United States decides to do? Brazil's next best customers are Russia and China, respectively.

Few commodities experts here expect sugar prices to stay as high as they are now for much longer. But they say the leveling off will come at a point substantially above 1973's then-record highs. And even if there is a recession in the world sugar market, Brazil has an out: Because of skyrocketing crude oil prices (Brazil imports three-fourths of the crude oil it needs annually) the state petroleum company here has started mixing more sugarbased alcohol in its gasoline, to help curb the nation's oil import

In "The Wound Within," Alexander Kendrick reminds the reader that several dictatorships ago in the Republic of South Vietnam, one of the powers behind the bamboo throne was Mme Ngo Dinh Nhu, better known as the Dragon Lady. When her relatives clashed with the Buddhists and monks burned themselves to death in protest. Mme. Nhu ridiculed the suicides "barbecues" and suggested that American journalists who did not love her government should follow the example of the monks. But not all her caustic remarks could be totally ignored: "Anything that happens in Vietnam will find its counterpart in the United States."

The author, a respected cor-respondent, broadcaster and biographer of Edward Murrow, takes off from Mme. Nhu's com ment to provide a close and detailed survey of what was happening in and to the United States during the Vietnam war years. He declares that American involvement began in the cold-war mentality following World War II—"the application of the Truman Doctrine to Asia in the Korean war." The Truman Doctrine, it will be recalled, was designed to save Greece and Turkey from Communist domination. not from each other, an ironic footnote in the summer of 1974. After the United States defeated Japan, there was a residue of friendship in Asia-on the Chinese mainland as well as in small countries that had lived under occupation or colonial rule. "The costliest failure was not of intelligence but of imagination," he writes, "Americans have flown around the dark side of the moon but the other side in Vietnam has remained dark to American understanding." None of the Presidents or their principal advisers are spared in The Wound Within," President Eisenhower and his secretary of state provided the philosophical underpinning for military intervention in Vietnam. It was carried out in a small but important quantum lesp by President Kennedy and his former college pro-fessors and foundation executives in positions of power and was followed by President Johnson, who kept the same intellectual warriors as national security advisers. President Nixon, the author emphasizes, did not bring "peace with honor but four years of unnecessary war with 20,000 American dead and 50,000 wounded. He considers the continued bombing a major reason for distilusionment with the Nixon administration.

Delicate play is often called for when the declarer loses control of the trump suit at an early stage because he has been forced to ruff. If one defender outnumbers the declarer in trumps, the defense usually succeeds. The declarer may need to return the compliment by forcing a defender to ruff.

Four spades was a tricky contract on the diagramed deal from a duplicate game played at a Long Island bridge club recently. There was a variety of final con-tracts, including part-scores and games in spades and diamonds by North-South, and part-scores and games in clubs by East-West. Those who played in four spades

"He used to be a congressman, but now I think he's got some high job in the government, though you wouldn't know it to talk to him. He makes his own breakfast and he leaves the door open so anyone can talk to him Those are his kids on the lawn there. His wife's a charmer, Used to be in show biz I hear but real down to earth. Yup. And they say they're going to have blacks and women and poor people and everyone visit them."

"It's going to be tough to get parking spot," I said. "Everyone in the neighborhood

"Any other changes I should know about?" I asked Marty. "The Ron Zieglers moved to California, and there's talk that Father McLaughlin is going to get a new parish somewhere. I hear the Pat Buchanans are leaving Festival or a Wake At Covent Garden?

By Tom Lambert

CONDON—The strolling singers are out this week at Covent Garden, and the red-seal basket racers and the Nell Gwynne look alikes, all whooping and cavorting and adding to the confusion and traffic jams with a kind of tearful, anticipatory

The famed vegetable, flower and fruit garden-established under charter by King Charles II in 1661—will be moving shortly across the Thames to its new location at Nine Eims near the Vauxhall Bridge.

When Covent Garden moves, a good stice of the history, pungency and color of downtown London will go with it. There will be no more shouting and laughing as the porters ram their barrows through the incredible traffic tieups of early morning, horn-honking trucks and cursing drivers, no more of the rich mixture of fragrances of fresh-cut flowers and Spanish meions and perfumed ladies going home from the opera or having one for the road at the old Nags Head Pub.

"And a good thing, too" one produce dealer said sourly the other day. "My lorries simply cannot move in this place. Atmosphere and sentiment are all very well, but we have to be able to move."

Some 270 dealers and firms buy and sell 4,000 tons of produce daily in Covent Garden, a nine-acre former pasture laced with streets, alleys and byways, thronged with perhaps 3,000 pickup trucks daily.

Few Feet Per Hopr

It is not unusual for a truck to move only a few feet per hour, and some dealers complain the congestion costs them customers and cash.

The new Nine Elms market, which covers nearly 70 acres, boasts a free-flowing traffic system and parking space for 3,000 trucks and other vehicles.

Meanwhile, getting ready for the Covent Garden close-down on Oct. 14, a festival committee has scheduled this week a program of exhibitions, poetry readings, street dances and other events to say good-bye to the 3,500 men who have been working the produce companies and stalls.

There will be red-seal basket races, in which porters will try to pile as many of those fruit carriers on their heads as possible. There will be concerts in St, Martin-in-the-Fields and St. Paul's Churches in the Covent Garden area. There will be a prize for the man or woman dressed most appropriately as Nell Gwynne. Tradition has it that King Charles II spotted Nell in Covent Garden, where part of the film "My Fair Ledy"

In Covent Garden, feelings are mixed about the move to Twe been here more than a quarter of a century," one dealer said. "I will miss it." A young porter, shrugging, said he didn't mind moving

"it will be easier to get around at the other place." Nobody seems quite certain what will happen in Covent Garden after the produce men go. The market site and sur-rounding area, comprising some 96 acres, has been the subject of a much argued redevelopment project. The Greater London Council once wanted to tear down 80 of the area's older buildings and replace them with shops, hotels, schools and new Conservationists, preservationists, citizens groups and finally the former Conservative government objected to various parts of the plan.

"It's still very much there," a council office said, "but it's still being very much debated."
